

The task of the software development team is to engineer the illusion of simplicity.